

our Cause are second to those of no other person, should have been the same for our intemperance because the thought trust & not flattery was needed and no more done, & support at the same time wondered, - I need not speak. I could not attempt to discuss the matter by writing in the Standard. It would not be listened to. It would be a disrespectful to you, I think, would March 6th to Congress, desired that body to propose to the States the gradual abolishment of Slavery; - the United States to compensate them for the inconveniences of a change of system.

I am sorry for the word gradual: it gives an opportunity for calling him "Pharaoh, still reluctant to let the people go." - While in fact I suppose the word to be only a make-weight like the word compensation: a couple of thrown to two heads of the slave.

consequence,

[illegible]

I could wish that you English would hail this National Congress. It saves the will be no trifle in human history, so far as this Congress is concerned. It is a great step as it is the first was virtually none! - it is not this message from the light of a quarter, a shock and it is, as far we hear, enthusiastic the people. The has been a great Mass at N. York, where the ladies were enthusiastic.
You could see the in Calicut, but I am not
+ but one, - Blair's.

authorizing of great joy. We might be entreated to take part in the great work of the world, but we must be willing to sacrifice all for the cause of the oppressed.
We must be willing to suffer for the sake of the truth, and to be counted as the enemies of the world.
We must be willing to be despised and persecuted for the sake of the truth, and to be counted as the enemies of the world. We must be willing to be despised and persecuted for the sake of the truth, and to be counted as the enemies of the world.